GRIEGO ζά POR διά Y ALGUNAS GLOSAS «LESIAS»

En el léxico de Hesiquio puede encontrarse un preverbio ζά ‘mucho, muy’, sin indicación del origen dialectal; esta forma ha sido citada como típicamente lesbia por Johannes Grammaticus Philoponus (490-580 d.C.) en su libro sobre el dialecto lesbio. De hecho, la aparición de <ζά> en lugar de <διά> puede observarse sólo dos veces en las inscripciones lesbias. Por otra parte, el uso de ζά se atestigua en el dialecto literario, tanto en Safo como en Alceo. Hay testimonios de ζά también en los poemas homéricos, y como elementos probablemente homéricos aparecen también en la lírica arcaica. Según Hoffmann, todas las glosas de Hesiquio que muestran el uso del preverbio ζά en lugar de διά deben interpretarse a partir de un origen en el dialecto lesbio. Sin embargo, parece más probable que el gran grupo de glosas de compuestos con ζά- sean más bien formaciones poéticas. Todas per-

Among other forms in the lexicon of Hesychius a preverb ζά ‘much, very’, without an indication of the dialectal provenance can be found; this form has been quoted as a typical Lesbian formation by Johannes Grammaticus Philoponus (490-580 AD) in his work on Lesbian dialect. In fact, the occurrence of <ζά> instead of <διά> may be observed only twice in Lesbian inscriptions. On the other hand, one observes the use of ζά attested in literary dialect, both in an absolute form and as a member of compound in Sappho and Alceus. The forms with ζά- are attested also in Homeric poems, and as probable Homeric elements they occur also in the Archaic Lyric. According to Hoffmann, all the gloses found in Hesychius, which display the use of the preverb ζά in place of διά should be interpreted as originating from the Lesbian dialect. It seems however more probable to consider the big group of compound gloses consisting of ζά- to be

* The Lesbian inscriptions are quoted by a number after Hodot 1990, pp. 272-317 using the specification of the finding place of Lesbian inscriptions as: MYT Mytilene, MAT Methymna, ERE Eressos, LES Lesbos without determination of a city and NAS the island of Nesso.

The ancient authors have been quoted according to the electronic editions in Thesaurus Linguae Graecae Project. The abbreviations follow the model as in LSJ. The Lesbian poets, however, have been quoted according to the edition of E. Lobel and D. L. Page, Poetarum Lesbiorum fragmenta, Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1955, and according to D. L. Page, Supplementum lyricis Graecis, Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1974.

tenean a la dicción poética (incluso aunque no pueda excluirse en algunos casos la posibilidad de su existencia en el uso vernacular), donde desde la épica temprana existieron las variantes motivadas métricamente ζα- y δια- una al lado de la otra. El intercambio existente de ζά por διά, debido a razones métricas, en Safo y Alceo tiene que ser considerado otro elemento de la influencia épica/homérica sobre una tradición poética independiente eolia.

rather poetical formations. They all belong to the poetical diction (even if the possibility of existing in the vernacular use in some cases cannot be excluded), where since early Epic the metrically caused variants ζα- and δια- existed hand in hand. The occurring interchange ζά for διά for the metrical reason in Sappho and Alcaeus should then be considered another element of Epic/Homeric influence upon an independent Aeolic poetical tradition.

The lexicon of Hesychius from Alexandria (5th/6th cent. AD)<sup>1</sup> is still of great importance as far as the exegesis of the Classical texts is concerned; the questions, however, whether it could be considered a reliable source of dialectological data, and especially, whether the glosses attest the real state of the vernacular language spoken in different regions of Greece seem sometimes problematic. Of course the work of Hesychius is based on the earlier ones, especially on a non preserved lexicon by Diogenianus from Heraklea Παντοδαπή λέξις (quoted by Hesychius under the name Περιεργοπένητες); among others, the glosses by Aristarchus, Apion, Heliodorus, Kyrrillus and the orthographical works by Herodianus had been used (cf. Latte 1953, pp. XLII-XLVII). It is to be said that the lexical material attested in glosses often does not fit the epigraphical evidence, as they have been quoted mostly from various literary sources. In case of Lesbian dialect, the Lesbian poets have been for the most part the primary source for Hesychius, their language on the other hand exhibits much traces of Homeric dialect (color Homericus, cf. Kazik-Zawadzka 1958)<sup>2</sup>.

Among other forms in the lexicon of Hesychius a preposition ζά ‘much, very’, without an indication of the dialectal provenance can be found, cf. Z 1: Ζά· μέγα. ισχυρόν. πολύ. ὅθεν καὶ ζάπλουτος ὁ μεγαλόπλουθος. This form has been quoted as a typical Lesbian formation by Johannes Grammaticus Philoponus in his work on Lesbian dialect, cf. Comp. III 3: Αὐτὶ δὲ τοῦ Δ τὸ Ζ, διαβάλλειν ζαβάλλειν, διὰ νυκτὸς ζὰ νυκτός (Hoffmann 1893, pp. 204-222); it has been also referred to in Scholia to Homer, this time, however, without pointing at the dialectal origin, e.g. Sch. in I 516a.4 ff.: ἀλλὰ μήποτε τὸ μὲν ζάφελος προπαροξύνεται λόγῳ τοιούτῳ· τὰ εἰς οὓς λήγοντα συγκείμενα παρὰ τὸ ζά προπαροξύνεται, ζάθεος ζάκοτος· οὗτος οὖν καὶ ζάφελος. τὸ δὲ ζαφελῶς περισπᾶται.

In fact, the occurrence of ζά instead of διά may be observed only twice in Lesbian inscriptions, they are exclusively attested in the Roman period<sup>3</sup>, similarly the use of a name (in dat. sg.) Ζονυσσω (for Διονύσῳ) is attested in MYT 037a.5 (2nd/3rd cent. AD, public distributions)<sup>4</sup>, maybe in religious context in MYT 038.7 (2nd or 3rd cent.) ] τῷ Ζονυσσῷ τῷ ... . On the other hand, one observes the use of ζά attested in literary dialect, both in an absolute form and as a member of compound, both in Sappho and Alcaeus<sup>5</sup>, and what seems more important the forms with ζα- are attested in Homeric poems; as probable Homeric elements they occur also in the Archaic Lyric, cf. e.g. A 38: Κίλλαν τε ζαθέην Τενέδοιό τε ἵρι ἀνάσσεις, ε 368: ως δ' ἄνεμος ζαῆς ἥων θημῶνα τινάξῃ, also e.g. in Pi., Pyth. 5.70: ἐν Ἀργεί τε καὶ ζαθέᾳ Πύλῳ.

According to Hoffmann, all the glosses found in Hesychius, which display the use of the preverb ζά in place of διά should be interpreted as originating from the Lesbian dialect (Hoffmann 1893, p. 237). This assumption is, however, rather problematic<sup>6</sup>. One has to emphasize that ζά for διά may be

<sup>6</sup> The similar phenomena also occur sporadically in the other dialects, cf. the Elean «zetaicism» (use of <Ζ> in place of <Δ>), which occurs in the inscriptions from 6th and 5th cent. BCE. The problem is old and it had attracted attention of many scholars. According to Méndez Dosuna a similar situation can be found in Rhodian, Cretan and Argolic (Méndez Dosuna 1993, p. 85). The author discusses two general proposals concerning the explanation of this fact. One of them is to treat <Ζ> as an indication of spirantization (fricative /θ/ < *d̪i>), according to another one <Ζ> for <Δ> is an inverse spelling (ibid., pp. 86-90). He observes the distribution of both graphemes in different phonological contexts (four types). In the first one <Δ> is used for *d and *d̪i, in the second one «the outcome of *d is rendered by <Ζ>». The observed only in the texts of Lesbian poets, the examples from the dialectal inscriptions come from the stylized inscriptions of the Imperial times (both MYT 244 and MYT 037). The emerging of ζά instead of διά takes place because of the consonantization of /i/ before a vowel (Thumb and Scherer 1959, p. 89; Lejeune 1972, pp. 114 f., 173, 245; Rix 1992<sup>2</sup>, pp. 45, 90 ff.)<sup>7</sup>, so that from the phonological point of view it can be treated as an example of the regular palatalization, caused by metrical needs: /di/ → /d̥i/ /_ [+Voc], then /d̥i/ → /d'd'/ → /d'ž/ → /dz/ (Blümel 1982, pp. 114 f., 117; Méndez Dosuna 1993, p. 82<sup>2</sup>; for the general problem of palatalizations in Greek and Aeolic see Brixhe 1978, pp. 65-73, esp. 66-69). Hodot points to the fact that the consonantization of /i/ in hiatus occurred only due to the metrical requirements; in the vernacular dialect of Sappho and Alcaeus, a spoken Lesbian of 7th cent. BCE, probably two possible variants of pronunciation of /di + V/ —monosyllabic or dissyllabic— really existed, but the change to the sound written with <z> should not be considered a sound-law (Hodot 1990, p. 42 f.). The evidence from the Lesbian Poets yields 4 phonetic variants of /dia/ in different contexts: [di] /_ [+Voc or #]; [d̥ia] (i.e. <ζα>) /_ [+Cons]; [d̥ia] (i.e. <ζα>) /_ [#; +Cons]; «Sievers» [di,ia] /_ [#; +Cons] (Hodot 1990, p. 43)<sup>8</sup>.

third type is a mixed one with <Δ> for *d, *d̥i but with examples of <Ζ> «reproducing *d»; in the fourth one «<Δ> stands for *d whereas <Ζ> represents the reflex of *d̥i» (ibid., p. 83 ff.). All of them represent the different chronological stages in the adaptation of the alphabet to the different phonetic processes. At the first stage, the Proto-Greek *d̥i «underwent gemination [ddi] and evolved into prepalatal /d'd'/», then in Elean /d'd'/ > /dd/ (depalatalization), in the same time the voiced fricatives occurred /β, δ, γ/. «Thus, at the crucial moment when the alphabet reached Elis (not later than the middle of the 6th century), Elean contrasted fricative /d/ and plosive /dd/ ... the most natural representation for both was indeed the symbol <Δ>». The letter <Ζ> could at this stage be optionally used for /δ/, the use of <Ζ> for *d disappears in the second half of the 5th century. At last «<Ζ> is given the conventional value [dd] and <Δ> corresponds to ancient *d» (Méndez Dosuna 1993, pp. 102 f., 105). For the pure graphical reason of Elean <Ζ> for <Δ> speaks also Minon. She interprets the occurrences with <Ζ> as the «emploi hypercorrect»; the fluctuation between both letters could be used, according to her, to emphasize the Elean identity in times «les Éléens avaient à se faire reconnaître comme administrateurs du sanctuaire» (Minon 1998, pp. 204 ff.).

<sup>8</sup> Cf. the examples of διά in Lesbian poetry: Sappho 1.12 διὰ μέσσω·; 2.5 ἐν δ' ὕδωρ ψῦχρον κελάδει δι' ὕσδων; 3.9 [ ] διάκηται; 39.2 οὐ διάμειπτον; 98b.10 μνάματ· ἵδε γὰρ αὖτα διέρρυε[ν]; 261a.2 col. 1.18 διεν]εχθῆναι καὶ; 276.1 col. 2.17 διὰ τὸ χ[ ; 282.14 ...] διὰ τὸ συνίστασθ[αι]; Alcaeus 129.21 κήνων ὁ φύσγων οὐ διελέξατο; 179 col. 2.6 ]δι' ἄσπιδος ἄν[ ;

If one compares Alc. 34a.8 with Sappho 1.12, it is clear that the choice between phonetic realizations is solely dependent on the metrics:

Alc. 34a 8:      οῖ κὰτ εὑρηναν χ[θόνα] καὶ θάλασσαν
                   παῖσαν ἔρχεσθ' ὡ[κυπό]δων ἐπ' ἵππων, πύ]κνα δίν[νεντες πτέρ' ἀπ' ὠράνῳθε-

                   ρο]ς διὰ μέσσω·

where both ζακρυόεντος and διὰ stand in the same (both metrically and functionally) kind of verse —uersus Adonius (˘ ˘ ˘ ˘)—, used as a clause in the sapphic strophe. In the first case, the metrical scheme demands one syllable (el. longum), in the second one, the sequence of two short syllables:

       /dza. kru. o. en. tos/   /ros# di.ja# mes. so:/

If the phenomenon depends really only on the metrics, there is nothing strange in its absence in the prosaic texts of Lesbian inscriptions, which yield exclusively διά<sup>10</sup>. The Homeric material, however, also brings a number of

<sup>9</sup> One should be aware the Alc. form (hapax legomenon) in fact stands for the original δα- (δακρυόεις ‘tearful’ LSJ, cf. E 737, Θ 388, P 512), like some other Homeric words, e.g. ζάκορος, ζάπεδον; il apparaît que la prononciation divergeant assez peu, des confusions se sont produites et l'on a ζα- pour δα-» (DELG II 396); cf. also Risch 1981, p. 291 ff., who says «δα- und ζα- waren also für die epische Dichter gleichbedeutend und konnten nach metrischen Bedürfnissen abgewechselt werden», also Rodríguez-Somolinos 1998, p. 160 f. For the semantics of the prefix, see below.

<sup>10</sup> Cf. MYT 03.6: εἰς τὸν δαμὸν τῷ Μυτίλ[ηναων δια τῷ] αγῆν τὸ υδωρ ο επαγγελ[λει εις; MYT 09.38 [να]ι τα πολ[ι ευνοος] [εω]ν διατελ[ει και]; MYT 04.3 [των κατεληλυθον] των μη εμμενη εν ταις διαλυσι[ε]σσι των[ταισι]; IG XII (2) 11.20 (Mytilene not dialectal):

compound forms with ζα- in the first element instead of δια-, on the other hand, the Epic poetry has only διά as a preposition, e.g. διάκτορος (Hermes epiclesis), διακριδόν ‘entschieden’, διαμπερές ‘fortlaufend’ vs. ζάνς ‘heftig wehend’, ζάκτος ‘sehr erzürnt’, etc. (Strunk 1957, p. 117). Strunk suspects here «vermutlich altes sprachliches Gut», and considers it a secondary sound-change with a shift from syllabic /i/ to consonantal /j/, probably under the influence of the absence of the accent and then the identical development, as in the cases of the original */i/ → /di/ (type ἐλπίζω < *ἐλπίδιω). He mentions the situation in Lesbian, but without any indication of the chronology and general stylistics of the inscriptions, as well as without any comment on the nature of the Lyrical evidence<sup>11</sup>. He points to the attested name of Dionysos in a form Ζιονν(σιος) from a coin from Phokaea (as possible «Zwischenstadium»)<sup>12</sup>, which he compares to the Alc. Ζόννυσον and the above mentioned forms in the Imperial inscriptions. The tendency would then be a common Greek one, and archaic: the other proof could be, according to him, the attested Cypriot gloss in Hsch. K 3608 (cod.) κορζία· καρδιά. Πάφιοι (with historical orthography; a compromise between the trisyllabic κορδιά and a dissyllabic κόρζα; Lejeune 1972, p. 245) and Hsch. Z 11 ζάει· κινεῖ καὶ πνεῖ. Κύπριοι, which directly corresponds to the Epic διάλημ (e.g. ε 478; Strunk 1957, p. 119). Allen speaks against such an assumption, seeing here «the spelling [di]», which «almost certainly represents a later editing based on the general value of ζ, since they are not found in early Lesbian inscriptions». The phonetic value [z] or [dz] could be of the «local origin, for which at the editorial date ζ was the most appropriate writing» (Allen 1968, p. 56). Hodot comes to a similar conclusion and admits that some general tendency of shortening dissyllabic forms of prepositions could have existed in Greek, and as such was used in

Lyric. The evidence shows that the examples of change from ἀνά to ὅν-, κατά to κατ-, παρά to παρ- might often be observed (Hodot 1990, p. 44 f.). The prefix in the Homeric non-verbal possessive compounds is used to express a sort of intensive meaning: ζά-θεος, -κοτος, -τρεφές, -φλεγές; the same situation recurs in post-Homeric poetry and Classical Greek, where δια- means ‘durch und durch, sehr, vollständig’ (Schwyzer-Debrunner 1950, p. 449), which is proved by Hesychius himself, who quotes Ζά· μέγα. ισχυρόν. πολύ. οὐθεν καὶ ζάπλουτος ὁ μεγαλόπλουτος (Z 1). According to Chantraine, this function of the preposition («l’achèvement du proces») is an ancient one, preserved in Homeric forms (DELG I, 275 f.) or non-Homeric poetic compounds with the sense of a «superlatif» (DELG II, 396). It occurs generally in two types of formations, i.e. ζα- + adj. and ζα- + nom. agentis.

On the basis of such observations it seems probable to consider the big group of compound glosses consisting of ζα- to be rather poetical formations. The general question, however, concerning the nature of ζα-, whether it should be interpreted as a poetical Lesbian element, Aeolic element in Homer (if one assumes the archaic status of phaenomenon) or a Homeric element in Lesbian poetry does not seem possible to be answered. From the point of view of Greek dialectological lexicology the following forms are not specific vernacular Lesbian. Being poetical formations they should rather be understood as coming from either Homeric Epic or some other literary source with a certain amount of Homeric influence.

ζαβάλλειν

Z 3 ζαβάλλειν· ἐξαπατᾶν act. inf. ‘to deceive, to cheat’; the form is Hesychean hapax legomenon, it occurs as an entry in Lexicon of Hesychius without indication of the dialectal provenance and of the original author. It is obvious that the form should be considered a direct equivalent of the compound verb διαβάλλω ‘throw, carry over’, which since Herodotus can be used in the metaphorical sense ‘to deceive by false accounts, mislead’ (LSJ)<sup>13</sup>, cf. also Hsch Δ 942 διαβάλλει· καταγινώσκει. ύβριζει. παραπατᾷ. παραλογίζεται.

ζα- stands in place of δια-; it does not seem to have any intensive character at all (contrary to the Homeric poetic compounds analogously «Aeolized»). The form with such a meaning could occur in vernacular Lesbian, although without an «Epic» orthography. In fact it is attested once in Lesbian inscriptions in the juridical sphere, cf. ERE 01, a9 (4.th cent. BCE; political decree): ... σ[υ]γκατεκαυσε σωματα [των] πολιταν, και το τ[ε]λευταιον αφικομενος προς Αλεξανδρον κατ[ε]ψυευδετο και διεβαλλετο τοις πολιταις· κρινα[ι] ..., cf. the similar situation in Crete (Law from Gortys) IC IV 72, IX, 26 f.: φεκαστο εγρατται αι αν[δ]εκσαμ[ε]νος ε νενικαμενο[ς ε εν]κοιοτανς οπελον ε διαβαλομενος ε διαφειπαμενος; or IC IV 141.11 where the same formula is attested [διαβαλο]μενος ε διαβειπαμε[νος].

ζαβλεμέως

Hsch. Z 4 ζαβλεμέως· μεγάλως πεποιθώς adverb ‘daring much’, without an indication of the dialectal origin, the gloss is a Hesychean hapax legomenon. The form of the adverb seems to belong to the group of words connected with present stem βλεμεαίνω, as ἀβλεμέως<sup>14</sup> or ἀβλεμής, -ές ‘feeble, non-material; kraftlos’ attested once in Nic., Al. 82 ἀβλεμές ἡ γὰρ κεῖνο πέλει βάρος· αὐτὰρ ὁ θυμῷ<sup>15</sup>. In Homer the verb refers to a lion, e.g. P 22 θυμὸς ἐνὶ στήθεσσι περὶ σθένει βλεμεαίνει or in the same phrase of Hector, e.g. Θ 337 “Εκτῷρ δ’ ἐν πρώτοισι κίε σθένει βλεμεαίνων. The Hom. verb in the meaning ‘exult; sich brüsten, trotzen’ is the parallel formation to μενεαίνω ‘desire earnestly, eagerly’ (LSJ); it lacks, however, etymology. According to Risch, the word-formation model would expect here a denominative formation in -άινω from an unattested nominal stem *βλέμος, just like μενεαίνω < μένος; they stand, however, «für sich» in Greek (Risch 1974, p. 290 f.). The same conclusion is reached by Peters, who points to the fact that βλεμεαίνω ‘sich stark fühlen, mutig sein’ is to be found only in Epic. Together with μενεαίνω, they are isolated from the point of view of the Greek historical grammar. They belong to the class of verbs, which have been used to express «Stimmungen, Af-fekte, körperliche Zustände, Charaktereigenschaften». According to Peters, they are directly formed from the original -s stems *βλέμος, μένος with the analogous suffix -αίνω (Peters 1980, p. 169<sup>121</sup>).

<sup>15</sup> Except for this the adjective occurs only in commentaries, cf. e.g. Sch. in Il. 12, 42b ex. βλεμεαίνων· ἐντεῦθεν ὁ ἀβλεμής, ἀόργητος καὶ ἀργός. T; Eust., Comm. ad Hom. Il. III 352.3: ὅθεν ἀβλεμής, φασίν, ὁ ἀόργητος, καθ’ ἔτέρους δὲ εἰπεῖν, ἄνορμος, οὐ πεποιθώς, ἀτολμος, ἀσθενής, οἵς ἄπασιν ἐναντίος ὁ βλεμεαίνων; Hsch. A 138 ἀβλεμής: ἀτολμος ρ ἀτερπής, παρειμένος, οἱ δὲ κακός.

ζάβοτον

Hsch. Z 5 ζάβοτον· πολύφορβον. Πολύκτηνον adj. acc. sg. masc. or nom./acc. sg. neut. ‘rich in cattle’, it is a hapax legomenon without an indication of dialectal provenance. The Hsch. entry displays a form of adjective with poetic ζα- in the first and βοτός in the second member of compound, which corresponds to the neutral βοτόν ‘Weidevieh’ (a substantized adjective; Risch 1974, p. 25), cf. also βοτός· τροφή, ἥ βοσκή in Suda B 407. The stem *g<sup>u</sup>eh<sub>3</sub>- (cf. g<sup>u</sup>éh<sub>3</sub>-u-s, Gr. βοῦς, Ved. gáus, Rix 1992<sup>2</sup>, p. 147) also occurs in the secondary -sk’ē/o- present βόσκω ‘feed, tend, nourish, of cattle feed, graze (Hom.+; LSJ)’, formed from the zero-grade aorist root (Risch 1974, p. 276), cf. Hom. adj. βωτιάνειρα ‘nourishing the men’, as in τ 408: ἀνδράσιν ἡδὲ γυναιξὶν ἀνὰ χθόνα βωτιάνειραν· (cf. Risch 1974, p. 191 f.)<sup>16</sup>. The «Lesbian» preposition ζα- with intensifying meaning occurs here probably as a correspondence to the unattested compound *διάβοτος, the only trace of which could be the form of a compound verb δια-βόσκω ‘feed’, cf. Socrat. Ep. 19 (5th/4th cent. BCE), Philostr., VA 1.15, also ‘pasture’ in PMasp. 112.15 (6th cent. AD)<sup>17</sup>, the sources of the gloss are obscure.

ζαβρόν

Hsch. Z 6 ζαβρόν· πολυφάγον acc. sg. ‘one that eats much’, without an indication of dialectal provenance. The same entry is to be found also in Suda Z 3: ζαβρόν· πολυφάγον, also in this case there is no indication of dialectal origin; the form is not attested except for the aforementioned occurrences. The form can be interpreted as a poetic Epic compound noun (acc. sg.; equivalent of participle, or nomen agentis; cf. Risch 1974, p. 194). The preposition δια- occurs here in its «Lesbian» variant both phonetically as well as semantically (expressing the intensive meaning). In the second element, the stem *-g<sup>u</sup>rh<sub>3</sub>-ó- is attested, a zero-grade from the root *g<sup>u</sup>erh<sub>3</sub>- ‘to devour’ with «Laryngalschwund» (cf. «verschlingen» LIV<sup>2</sup>, 211)<sup>18</sup>. The root occurs in the Greek present βιβρώσκω attested for the first time in Babrius, i.e. in 2nd cent. AD; the compound, however, διαβιβρώσκω ‘to eat up, consume, corrode’ occurs earlier in Greek prose in Plato, Hippocrates, Galenus and others, one should point also to an Ep. aor. 2sg. ἔβρως (2sg.) < *g<sup>u</sup>rh<sub>3</sub>-.

<sup>17</sup> Cf. Socraticorum Epistulae 19.1-4: Ὅκε, θαυμασιώτατε, παρ’ ἡμᾶς· πεποίηται γὰρ ἡμῖν ιερὸν τῆς Ἀρτέμιδος μάλα ἀριτρεπές, καὶ περίφυτος ὁ χῶρος καὶ ἀνεῖται ιερὸς εἶναι. καὶ τὰ ὄντα ἡμᾶς διαβοσκήσει; Philostr., VA I 15: ἡ πόλις αὕτη, τρίτη τῶν ἐκεῖ — ὅροι δ’ ὕνιοι καὶ τὰ ἐξ βρῶσιν ἀναγκαῖα διέβοσκεν αὐτούς, τὸν γὰρ σῖτον οἱ δυνατοὶ ξυγκλείσαντες εἶχον.

Hsch. Z 8 ζάγρη· βόθρος. Λάπαθον nom. sg. ‘pitfall for wild beasts’, a hapax legomenon without an indication of dialectal origin, cf. however PN Ζαγρεύς. The gloss is obscure. Hoffmann interprets it as a compound containing Aeol. ζα- for δια- in the first and the Aeolic verbal stem ἀγρέω in the second element (Hoffmann 1893, p. 237). It seems, however, that the gloss belongs to the substantive ἄγρα (Ion. ἄγρη) ‘hunting’ (cf. the derivatives ἄγρευμα ‘prey’, ἄγρεύς ‘hunter’, etc.)<sup>19</sup> which in fact seems to continue the root *h<sub>2</sub>g<sup>u</sup>er- ‘gather together, take’ (LIV<sup>2</sup>, 276). Frisk assumes here the relation to the verb ζωγρέω ‘lebendig gefangen nehmen, capture’ in a Dor.-NW. variant with za:gre- from *zo:a-agre- (‘Rückbildung’, Frisk, GEW I 607; for the contraction see Lejeune 1972, pp. 260; 263). The gloss should then be explained as a deverbal fem. substantive in the zero grade *ζā-αγρ-ā (for the typus of the deverbal fem. in Greek see Risch 1974, p. 6)<sup>20</sup>. It seems that in this case ζα- in ζάγρη has nothing to do with Aeol. ζα- as equivalent of Ionic-Attic δια-, but is rather to be explained as a variant of the neuter pl. subst. ζῷα, probably in the Doric shape. The semantics also speaks against the interpretation as a compound with ζα-, since there is no intensive meaning to be observed and the form is expressing a concrete meaning.

<sup>18</sup> The form ζαβρός can have a parallel in the Homeric compound μολοβρός ‘greedy fellow’ (LSJ) an epitheton of Odysseus in mouth of the goatherd Melanthos, and Iros, cf. σ 26: ὃ πόποι, ὡς ὁ μολοβρός ἐπιτροχάδην ἀγορεύει, cf. Hsch. M 1569: *μολοβρός· μολίσκων ἐπὶ τὴν βοράν (S) τουτέστι παράστος, γαστρίμαργος vg, ἐπάιτης (S) καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος φαγεῖν γλούττων (ρ 219) ASN, also Hdn. Schem. 77: Μολοβρός, ἡ τὸν ἀδηφάγον, τὸν εἰς βορὰν προθύμως μολίσκοντα, ἡ τὸν μονοφάγον, ἡ τὸν πτωχὸν καὶ ὑπηρέτη μὴ χρώμενον, ἀλλ’ αὐτομολοῦντα ἐπὶ τὴν βοράν. The form is considered «volkstümliches Wort» (Frisk, GEW II 250 f.); according to Neumann it may be compared to the Myc. PN mo-ro-qo-ro in PY DM I 459, and translated as ‘Dreck-fressend’ (cf. Neumann 1992, pp. 75-80).

ζακαλλές

Hsch. Z 23 ζακαλλές: περικαλλές adj. nom. sg. neut./nom. pl. masc.-fem. ‘very beautiful’, hapax legomenon without an indication of dialectal origin. The entry Hsch. Z 23 gives a compound adjective, which should be considered a corresponding form to περικαλλές (περικαλλής, -ές), attested in Greek, since Homer, in the meaning ‘very beautiful’ («mostly of things, of women only E 389, Π 85, λ 11, 281, of men first in h. Merc.», cf. LSJ), cf. e.g. Λ 632 (describing the Nestor’s cup): πάρ δὲ δέπας περικαλλές, ὃ οἴκοθεν ἦγ’ ὁ γεραιός, or τ 34 (a lamp of Athena): ἔγχεά τ’ ὀξύοντα· πάροιθε δὲ Παλλὰς Ἀθήνη|| χρύσεον λύχνον ἔχουσα φάος περικαλλές ἐποίει; E 389 εἰ μὴ μητρινὴ περικαλλής Ἡερίβοια, etc. In Hsch. Lexicon one may also find other synonyms, cf. Θ 474 θητητόν· θαυμαστόν. καλόν. καταθύμιον. περικαλλές. σύμφορον, or Π 1723 περικαλλές· λίαν καλόν. The compound contains the poetic element ζα- (cf. the meanings of περί, also ‘very; sehr’) and stem καλλ- as in καλός (<*kaluo-), the original source of the form can hardly be pointed to.

ζαμενής

Hsch. Z 47 ζαμενής: [μεγάλως πεποιθώς.] εὔψυχος. Μέγα μένος ἔχων, also Hsch. Z 49 *ζαμενής· ἄγαν ἰσχυρός adj. nom. sg. ‘very strong, mighty’ (LSJ), without an indication of dialectal provenance. The form is attested neither in Lesbian inscriptions nor in the literary dialect. In Class. Gr. it occurs since h. Merc. 307 Πῇ με φέρεις Ἐκάεργε θεῶν ζαμενέστατε πάντων; it also occurs several times in Pindar’s poetry, e.g. N. 3.63: πάλιν οἴκαδ’ ἀνεψιὸς ζαμενής Ἐλένοιο Μέμνων μόλοι; Fr. 52i, 64 ἄνεμος ζαμενής ἐμ<ε>ιξ[ , once in Tragedy and in Hellenistic and Late Epic<sup>21</sup>. The form is an example of a strictly poetic adjective, an Epic element, and as such it is used also in late poetry. The formation is clear: ζά for διά has the poetic intensifying function; the gloss is qualified as Lesbian only on the basis of ζα- occurrence. It probably always contained this element, because there are no examples of the corresponding δια- forms, cf. however the form ἀμένητα ascribed to Lesbian (cf. Hsch. A 3583 ἀμένητα· ὑμένα. Αἰολεῖς).

<sup>21</sup> Cf. S., Ai. 137: σὲ δ’ ὅταν πληγὴ Διὸς ἡ ζαμενής; cf. also A.R. I 1029: δεινός τε ζαμενής τε Δολιονίῳ πέσε δήμῳ; Nonn., D. XXI 33: καὶ φυτὸν αὐδῆν ζαμενής ποιήσατο Θείη, etc.

ζαμήτας

Hsch. Z 51: ζαμήτας· μεγαλουργός nom. sg. ‘one, who does great things’, without an indication of dialectal origin, a hapax legomenon. This compound noun contains the «Lesbian» poetic ζα- prefix, while the second element corresponds to the root 1.**med-* ‘messen, für Einhaltung sorgen, sich kümmern’ (LIV<sup>2</sup>, 423), which is to be observed in the Gr. pres. μῆδομαι ‘to be minded, intend’ with the secondary lengthened full grade in middle formation, cf. on the other hand μέδομαι ‘plan, devise’ (LSJ). μῆδομαι occurs in Homer, cf. B 360: ἀλλὰ ἄναξ αὐτός τ’ εὖ μῆδεο πείθεο τ’ ἄλλῳ·, also Hes., Fr. 204.123: πα] τρὸς ἐρισθεν<έ>ος, μεγάλ’ ἀνδράσι μηδομένοιο. Another gloss should also be quoted, where a form of the athem. aorist μῆστο is attested, cf. Hsch M 1268 μῆστο: βουλεύσατο < **mēd-to-*, where μῆδομαι ‘to be minded, resolve, plan and do skilfully’<sup>22</sup>. With this meaning it is to be found in Pi. N. 10.64: ἔξικέσθαν, καὶ μέγα ἔργον ἐμήσαντ’ ὥκεως. The word is strictly poetic, in post-Hom. Gr. it occurs only in Lyric (exceptionally in Tragedy). The formation with the characteristic, highly productive suffix -της (cf. Risch 1974, pp. 31-37) ζαμήτας seems to have been treated as Lesbian only due to the occurrence of ζα-, as well as the /a:/ variant of the suffix (for the suffix in Lesbian cf. Hamm, 1958, p. 63 f.; Hodot 1990, passim pp. 93-128).

ζάπεδον

Hsch. Z 57 ζάπεδον· μέγα ἔδαφος nom. sg. ‘big ground, soil’, without an indication of dialectal provenance. The form is neither attested in Lesbian inscriptions nor in the literary dialect. It occurs in a fragment of Stesichorus, cf. fr. S15, col. 1.17 in dat. sg. [ ] ἐπὶ ζαπέδῳ, and in nom. sg. in Xenophanes (fr. B1, 1):

νῦν γὰρ δὴ ζάπεδον καθαρὸν καὶ χεῖρες ἀπάντων καὶ κύλικες· πλεκτοὺς δ’ ἀμφιτιθεῖ στεφάνους<sup>23</sup>.

This form occurs also in a votive epigramm from Paros, cf. IG XII 5.215 (5th. cent. BCE): ευχαμενοι στησαν πα[ρ]θενωι Αρτεμιδι | σεμνωι ενι ζαπεδωι κο(υ)ρη Διος αιγιοχοι<sup>24</sup>.

The form has been generally considered as an equivalent for the Homeric δάπεδον, attested elsewhere both in literature and in the inscriptions<sup>25</sup>. The interpretation of this fact is problematic, since there is no expected counterpart *διαπεδον to be observed anywhere in Greek. On the other hand, the element δα- attested in Hom. word is not to be compared with the preposition δια-, there is no intensification of meaning either. The compound δάπεδον ‘level surface, floor, ground, plain’ (LSJ)<sup>26</sup> should rather be interpreted as a continuation of the root *dem- ‘house’<sup>27</sup> in the zero grade in the first element + neutral <sup>o</sup>pedon ‘surface, Boden’ in the second member<sup>28</sup>. It should be interpreted as the determinative compound with the meaning ‘Hausplatz’ (Frisk, GEW I, 347 f.; Risch 1974, p. 214; Schindler, Wurz., pp. 82, 106). The provenance of δάπεδον <*dm-pedo- is confirmed by other compounds with ὄπεδον as e.g. ειλόπεδον, θειλόπεδον ‘Trockenplatz’, ισόπεδον ‘Ebene’, οινόπεδον ‘Weingarten’, etc. (Risch, ibidem), as well as the evidence from Hesychios, who explains it in Δ 247 *δάπεδον· ἔδαφος, γῇ ἡ οἴκος. Risch emphasizes that the metrical evidence from Xenophanes is also negative in this case: ζάπεδον stays in hexameter and should be read υ υ ˘, so only the second example could be explained as due to the metrical needs (with the substitution of ζά for διά, as mentioned above, cf. similar case of Alc. ζακρυόεντος, Risch 1981, p. 292). For Risch this is a proof that the form was not used for the first time. It seems probable that we have here an analogous poetic formation with «umgekehrte Schreibung» according to the model ζα- for δια-, the same as in case of Alc., or Hom. ζάκορος, which does not come from * δια-κόρος but < * δακόρος, attested in Myc. da-ko-ro, e.g. nom. pl. in PY An 207 and PY An 427.1, a ‘temple-attendant, originally floor-sweeper’ (Ventris-Chadwick 1959, 390), ‘temple servant?’ (Ventris-Chadwick 1973<sup>2</sup>, 538), ‘servidor del templo’ (DM I, 151; cf. also entry in DELG)<sup>29</sup>.

<sup>28</sup> Gr. πέδον n. ‘ground, earth’ < */ped-o-m/ has direct correspondences in the forms from other languages as Hitt. pedan ‘place’, Ved. padá- ‘Fußspur, Schritt’, Arm. het (gen. hetoy) ‘trace de pas’, Umbrian perūm (different forms are attested peṛū, perso acc. sg., peṛume, persome acc. sg.) —with a semantic switch from ‘Stelle für den Fuß, Fußboden’ to ‘ritual pit for offerings, Grube, Opfergrube’ (WOU, 524 f.)—. In all cases the derivational base is the word for ‘foot’ (Risch 1974, p. 13), «Wurzelnomene» *pōd-s (nom. sg.), *pod- (strong cases), *ped- (weak cases), cf. Ved. pāt, gen. padás, Gr. Att. ποῦς (for /po:s/), ποδός, Lat. gen. pedis (Schindler, Wurz., p. 31; Rix 1992<sup>2</sup>, p. 143; Meiser 1998, p. 36). πέδον is used to express the measure of a surface, cf. such meaning attested also for Gr. ποῦς, in Lat. only late derivatives as pedatūra ‘mesure de terrain’ (Ernoult-Meillet, 501), maybe oppidum < *ob-ped-o- (cf. Gr. ἔμ-πεδον ‘solid, firm’, OIr. in-ad ‘Ort’ < *em-pedo-), cf. however Lat. oppodium in CIL I<sup>2</sup> 585<sub>81</sub> (111 BCE; Sommer 1948, p. 112). Here one may also add a Gallo-Latin candetum ‘the measure of a 100 feet of a field’, attested in Columella V 1.6: at Galli candetum appellant in

Ζαπιμελόν

Hsch. Z 58 ζαπιμελόν· μεγάλως πῖον, λιπαρόν adj. nom. sg. neut. or acc. sg. masc. ‘very fat’, hapax legomenon, without an indication of dialectal provenance. The adjective ‘very fat’ ζαπιμελόν is to be interpreted as compound

areis urbanis spatium centum pedum, in agrestibus autem pedum cl, quod aratores candetum nominant; semiijugerum quoque arepennem uocant. The form is usually interpreted as a corrected compound from *cantedum < *kant-(p)ed-o- with a numeral 100 in the first element (attested also as the first element in Celtic personal names Canto-), cf. W. cant, OIr. cét ‘hundred’ and original name for ‘foot’, continued by MIr. ed ‘Zeitraum’ with the characteristic loss of /p/ in Anlaut (Dottin 1920, p. 240 f.; Pedersen 1909, p. 91; cf. also Thurneysen 1993, p. 138 ff. for the OIr. treatment of */p/); Celtic words from the agricultural sphere are attested in Latin, cf. arepennis (Colum. V 1.6), arinca, beccus, beta, cандosoccus, ceruesia, cramum, taxea, tucca, etc.

<sup>29</sup> Cf. Méndez Dosuna 1993, p. 85: «The substitution of word-initial <ΔI> by <Ζ> and <Δ> ... (where <Δ> indicates consonantalization of i without lengthening of the preceding syllable, i.e. without gemination of /d/) has probably led to hypercorrect forms such as ζάπεδον (cf. Hom. δάπεδον), and ζακόρος (Myc. da-ko-ro)».

formation with «Lesbian» intensifying ζά for διά + the adjective derived from the attested substantive πιμελή ‘fat, lard’ (cf. Hdt. II 40.7: σπλάγχνα δὲ αὐτοῦ λείπουσι ἐν τῷ σώματι καὶ τὴν πιμελὴν), which may itself continue a root */pi:/, cf. πῖαρ ‘fat, Fett, Talg’ (Ep., Ion., Hom.+), πίων, πίον, πίειρα (fem.) ‘fett, fruchtbar, reich’. The adj. πίων (/i:/) < *piH-uo:n and fem. πίειρα (/i:/) < *pi:er-ja < *pi:uerja < */piH-uer-ih₂/ are commonly compared to the Ved. pair pívan-, fem. pívarī- (Risch 1974, p. 62; Rix 1992<sup>2</sup>, p. 165). It seems, however, more probable that they both are independent secondary formations from an original heteroclitic neutral substantive *piHuṛ > πῖαρ (Schindler 1975, p. 53; Peters 1980, p. 187)<sup>30</sup>. The above mentioned πιμελή (fem.) ‘Fett, Schmalz, soft fat’<sup>31</sup> appears for the first time in Hdt. II 47.17: ἐκάλυψε πάσῃ τοῦ κτήνεος τῇ πιμελῇ τῇ περὶ τὴν νηδὸν γινομένῃ, so it is rather rare in Attic (cf. S., Ant. 1011 μηροὶ καλυπτῆς ἔξεκεντο πιμελῆ); on the other hand, it is often attested in the later Greek. The word-formation and etymology pose problems with interpretation, since there are no examples of other formations containing the same suffix *-mel- (Frisk, GEW II 532), the relation to */pi:/ is also problematic<sup>32</sup>. πιμελή functions as the basis for adj. derivation, cf. πιμελής, -ές ‘fat’ (mostly in medical writers), while πιμελός occurs sporadically: cf. Cerc. 7.5 πιμελοσαρκοφάγων πάσας μελεδώνας: ‘sepulchre of the fat’; it is also attested once in the composition wth δια-: σὰρξ διαπίμελος καὶ ἀδενώδης, πάγκρεας (Ruf., De corp. hum. apell. 176.1; 1st/2nd. cent. AD). As in other cases above, this gloss has been also considered Lesbian on the basis of the presence of an intensive ζα- prefix. The form πιμελή is attested neither in Homer nor in Lesbian Lyric or inscriptions. The direct source of the gloss is obscure, the counterpart διαπίμελος, however, is attested relatively late but it could point to the poetical use of a form with a typical poetical ζά instead of διά. The word is not specifically dialectal.

<sup>30</sup> πῖαρ n. «fat, any fat substance» (LSJ) < Proto-Greek */pi:uar/ may be compared to Ved. pívas- n. with the same meaning; in Greek, however, next to the formations in -uen, -uer also others are attested, e.g. adj. in -άλεος πιαλέος ‘fat’ (poetic form, cf. Risch 1974, p. 104). All the Gr. forms probably belong to verbal root *pejH-/*piH- ‘anschwellen’ (LIV<sup>2</sup>, 464 f.), cf. Ved. páyate, prá-pūta- ‘spouting, abounding’, perf. pīpāya.

<sup>32</sup> «πιμελή f. ‘Fett, Schmalz’ /ion.-att./ für sich steht» (Frisk, ibid.). The Lat. form opīmus, according to some scholars may be related; it is to be said, however, that it also lacks explanation within Latin itself (Ernoult-Meillet, 462).

ζαπότην

Hsch. Z 60 ζαπότην· ισχυροπότην acc. sg. ‘toper, drunkard’, a Hesychean hapax legomenon without mentioning the dialectal origin. The compound yields «Lesbian» ζα- in the first element, in an intensive meaning. In the second element the nomen agentis in zero grade **po:-ta:s* from the root **peh<sub>3</sub>(i)-/pih<sub>3</sub>-* occurs (poh<sub>3</sub>(i)- zero grade / _ C; Praust 1998, 184; different LIV<sup>2</sup>, 462 f., where **peh<sub>3</sub>(i)-*), which in Greek may be found in a nasal present πίνω<sup>33</sup>. Lesbian uses another variant of the same root, namely the form of a thematic nasal present πάνω < **po:-né/o-*, with root aorist πῶ, ὥπωθι<sup>34</sup> (cf. Ved. ápat), known from Alcaeus<sup>35</sup>. The verb πάω/πίνω builds a number of compounds (used mostly in the context of liquid substances), cf. e.g. Aesch., Pers. 611: βοός τ' ἀφ' ἀγνῆς λευκὸν εὔποτον γάλα, Hsch. E 7095: εὔπωνος ὅμβρος· εὔποτος ‘easy to drink, pleasant to the taste’ (LSJ), it occurs also in Photius: Πηγὴ ἀναδίδωσιν ὕδωρ ιερόν τε καὶ εὔποτον (Cod. 242 Bekker page 346b. 9). The form of nomen agentis (second element in ζαπότης) is also used («usu. in fem.; masc. only in metaph.», cf. LSJ), for feminine cf. e.g. Ar., Th. 735: Ὡ θερμόταται γυναῖκες, ὃ ποτίσταται. The metaphorical use in Ar., Nu. 58 οἵμοι. τί γάρ μοι τὸν πότην ἥπτες λύχνον, where πότης refers to a lamp (as consuming much oil)<sup>36</sup>. The compound with pref. δια- occurs for the first time in Hdt. V 18.6 Ως δὲ ἀπὸ δείπνου ἐγίνοντο, διαπίνοντες εἴπαν οἱ Πέρσαι τάδε· , δια- has in this case the meaning synonymous to προ-, as is visible from an entry in Hsch. Δ 1223: διαπίνειν· προπίνειν. Ἐπιγένης (fr. 8, II 419 K.) with reference to the fragment of Epigenes Comicus: fr. 8 διαπίνειν<sup>37</sup>.

<sup>33</sup> «Neubildung» < **pih<sub>3</sub>-*, cf. impv. πῖθι ‘drink!’ (< **pih<sub>3</sub>-d<sup>h</sup>i*), other forms as Ved. pīta- ‘who has drunk’, OCS. piti (new formation of them. present pijo) —originally an abstract **pih<sub>3</sub>-tej*, cf. Ved. pī-ti ‘drinkig, a drink’, **pi-t-* from which an OCS. denom. pit-atī ‘nourish’—; pirъ ‘συμπόσιον’ (from an adj. **pih<sub>3</sub>-ro-*); the concurrence between two variants: Aeolic po:- and non-Aeolic pi:- has been explained in different ways. LIV<sup>2</sup>, 462 f. esp.<sup>1, 12</sup> considers Aeol. formation of impv. *mit Übertragung von ō aus vorauszusetzenden Formen mit alter R(e) in die 2s Ipv; πάνω trinke mit Übertragung der R(e) vom Aorist *έπων*. Praust emphasizes that the 2sg. root-aorist impv. has zero grade in IE, the sequence **pih<sub>3</sub>-C-* would be the expected one (against Gr. βῆθι, στῆθι, which have the secondary full grade from ind./inj. aor.; Praust 1998, p. 185<sup>6</sup>).

<sup>34</sup> The same form is to be found also in Cyprus ICS 264, 1 ka-i-re-te ka-ra-si-ti [wa]-na-xe ka po-ti we-po me-ka me-po-te we-i-se-se... χαιρετε. γρασθι, [fa]ναξ, κα(ς) πωθι. φεπο(ς) μεγα· μηποτε φεισης «eat, Lord, and drink ...».

<sup>35</sup> Cf. 401, 401b χαῖρε καὶ πῶ τάνδε; δεῦρο σύμπωθι; cf. also other forms (present): 375 ἐκ δὲ ποτήριον πάνης Διννομένη παρίσδων, 332 νῦν χρῆ μεθύσθην καὶ τινα πέρ βίαν | πάνην, ἐπεὶ δὴ κάτθανε Μόρσιλος, ...; also Alc. 170, col. 2 επωνε.[ (Hamm 1958, pp. 116, 131, 169). The use of such forms is attested by ancient grammarians, cf. Hdn.Gr. 3,1. 449.34: τὸ πάνω βαρύνεται ὡς ὕδιον Αἰολέων, the form was also used in poetry, as we may read in Ath. X 11,4): καὶ ἔθνη δὲ ὄλα εἰς πολυφαγίαν ἐκωμῷδεῖτο, ὡς τὸ Βοιωτόν. Εὕβουλος γοῦν ἐν Ἀντιόπῃ φησί (II 169 K).

Identically as in the case of ζαβρόν the form displays nom. agent. in the second member of compound; just like in all other cases the direct source of the gloss cannot be pointed to. The prefix occurs in its Epic, poetical variant; the form then should be interpreted as the poetical one, there is no evidence to answer the question, whether it could have any relations to the vernacular speech (although from the semantical point of view such a possibility should not be excluded).

ζαφεγγεῖς

Hsch. Z 73: *ζαφεγγεῖς· λαμπροὶ καὶ ἐπιφανεῖς Asvgn πάνυ. adj. nom. pl. ‘very bright’, without an indication of dialectal provenance. This other Hesychian hapax legomenon can be interpreted as a compound, which consists of «Lesbian» ζά + a stem, which is to be found in a noun φέγγος ‘Licht, Schein, Glanz’ (in Greek attested since Homeric Hymns, a poetic word, in Archaic Lyric, Tragedy; Frisk, GEW II 999), cf. e.g. h.Cer. 278: σκίδνατο, τῆλε δὲ φέγγος ἀπὸ χροὸς ἀθανάτοιο<sup>38</sup>. It seems that a probable counterpart for the glossed form could be a line from 2nd. cent. AD author Ps.-Lucianus, Amores 26, 15: ἡ Σιδωνίας ύέλου διαφεγγέστερον ἀπαστράπτει, where the form of an adj. *διαφεγγής, -ές occurs in comparative. There is no indication of the source of the gloss; it seems, however, that it can be assumed that it comes from a post-Hom. Epic poetry (cf. occurrences in Call., Nic., A.R., Nonn.)<sup>39</sup>, it is certainly not a specific dialectal word belonging to the vernacular speech.

<sup>37</sup> Cf. Suda Δ 694: Διαπεινῶμεν ἀεὶ πρὸς τὸ πῦρ· παρὰ προσδοκίαν. ὡσεὶ ἔφη, διαπίνομεν ἀεὶ πρὸς τὸ πῦρ· ὃ δὲ εἶπε διαπεινῶμεν· οἱ γάρ πότοι χειμῶνος πρὸς τὸ πῦρ γίνονται. εἴρηκε δὲ οὕτω διὰ τὸν λιμόν. τουτέστιν ἐσχάτως πεινῶμεν, ὥστε καὶ τὰ ἴματα ἀποδύνομενοι καθεζόμεθα πρὸς τὸ πῦρ διὰ τὸ βῆγος. ἢ διαπύρως καὶ ἐκτόπως πεινῶμεν· δὲ καὶ βέλτιον; the verb also in Eust., Comm. ad Hom. Odyss. I 347.15: προφέρεται γοῦν Ἀναξανδρίδης μὲν γράφων οὕτω. τὸ νέκταρ πάνυ μάττων ἐσθίω. διαπίνω τ' ἀμβροσίαν καὶ τῷ Διῷ διακονῶ. Ἀλκμάν δὲ λέγων τοὺς θεοὺς νέκταρ ἔδμεναι, cf. Anaxandr. (4th cent. BCE) fr. 57 τὸ νέκταρ ἐσθίω πάνυ | μάττων διαπίνω τ' ἀμβροσίαν.

Hsch. Z 74: ζαφελές· ἄγαν σκληρόν. ἡ μεγάλως ηύξημένον. [πολύφλογον]. ἄγριον. Θυμῶδες. ισχυρόν nom. sg neut. ‘violent’, without an indication of dialectal provenance. The form is quoted also by other sources, always, however, in the context of related Homeric formations.<sup>40</sup> On the other hand the form occurs neither in Lesbian inscriptions nor in the literary dialect. It seems to correspond to the Hom. compound adj. ἐπιζάφελος ‘violent’ used in context of anger (χόλος), cf. I 525:

οὗτοι καὶ τῶν πρόσθεν ἐπευθόμεθα κλέα ἀνδρῶν
ἡρώων, ὅτε κέν τιν' ἐπιζάφελος χόλος ἵκοι·

<sup>39</sup> The second element of the compound is obscure. According to Frisk it could be interpreted as «Alte Kreuzung» from *στέγγος and φᾶς (?; cf. Frisk, ibid.). In LIV<sup>2</sup> one may find the reconstruction of the root *(s)b<sup>h</sup>eng- ‘leuchten, glänzen’ to be found in a Greek present *(s)b<sup>h</sup>éng-e- φέγγω ‘leuchte, scheine’ (LIV<sup>2</sup>, 512); the AGS. spincan quoted by Pokorny and Frisk as related, should be rather considered a ghostword; OHG. funko, German Funke does not belong to the root. One compares it rather to the word for ‘fire’ (heterocliticon *péh<sub>2</sub>ur, gen. *ph<sub>2</sub>u(y)éns Schindler 1975, 9), which is attested in Germanic in the full grade stem OHG. fiur, zero grade in Goth. fun-in (n-stem fōn, funins, Euler 2000, p. 70 f.).

<sup>40</sup> Cf. e.g. Hdn.Gr. 3.1.514.8: οὐ γάρ ἐστι παρὰ τῷ ποιητῇ ζαφελῆς περιεσπάσθη δὲ τὸ ζαφελῶς; Sch. in I 516b.3: ex. (Hrd.) | ex. ἀλλ' αἰὲν ἐπιζαφελῶς: περισπωμένως, εἰ καὶ τὸ ζαφελες βαρύνεται. τὸ δὲ ζαφελῶς γίνεται ἐκ τοῦ ζα ἐπιτατικοῦ καὶ τοῦ ὄφελλω τὸ αὔξω, τὸ πάνυ ηύξημένως T; also Sch. in β 315.12 f.: ἐναπόθετος καὶ ἔμμονος· ζαφελῆς οὖν χόλος ἡ μῆνις, ζαφελές γάρ τὸ ἀναφαίρετον; Porph., Zet. cod. Vat. 311.3 ff.: ζαφελές γάρ τὸ ἀναφαίρετον, καὶ ζαφελῆς οὖν χόλος ἡ μῆνις, ὅτε κέν τιν' ἐπιζαφελῆς χόλος ἵκοι (I 521). περὶ γάρ τῶν μηνιόντων ὁ λόγος; cf. also Suda Z 22: Ζαφελῆς: ὁ ἀφελῆς. καὶ Ζαφελῶς, πάνυ ἀφελῶς.

the form of an adverb is also attested, I 516: Ἀτρεῖδης, ἀλλ’ αἰὲν ἐπιζαφελῶς χαλεπαίνοι, or ζ 330 πατροκασίγνητον· ὁ δ’ ἐπιζαφελῶς μενέαινεν<sup>41</sup>; it is also used in the post Homeric Epic poetry, e.g. in Hom. Hymns or A.R.<sup>42</sup>.

The form is considered an «Expressives Wort ohne Etymologie» (Frisk, GEW I 537), «terme expressif, archaïque, sans étymologie» (DELG II, 358) with Lesbian poetic prefix ζα-, probably a «Determinativkompositum» (Risch 1974, p. 214). The Hesychean form of a neutral adjective ζαφελές (with counterpart in Hsch. E 4771: ἐπιζαφελές· θυμῷδες, ὄργιλον Σ χαλεπόν. ἐπίκοτον) could be connected to the simple forms occurring in an Alexandrian Epic poetry, as the testimony of Nicander learns, cf. «Epic genitive» in Al. 556: ἀλθαίνει τότε νέρθε πυρὸς ζαφελοῦ κεραίης. This form has the same meaning as the Hom. compound ἐπιζάφελος and could be explained by the archaic tendencies of the Hellenistic Epic (Frisk, ibidem; DELG, ibidem). The entries in Lexica of Hesychius, E.M., Suda, as well as in (earlier) Scholia and commentaries to Homeric poems must be based on the existence of such forms.

Ζαφορῆσαι

Hsch. Z 77: ζαφορῆσαι· μεγάλως φορτίσαι aor. inf. ‘to load heavily’, without an indication of the dialectal provenance. The form can be considered compound with the «Lesbian» intensive ζά in first and a verb φορέω ‘carry’ in the second element. The gloss seems to correspond to the attested verb διαφορέω ‘spread abroad, carry away, plunder, tear in pieces’ (LSJ), occurring only in Prose, e.g. Hdt. I 88.11: ‘πολλῇ σπουδῇ ἐργάζεται’ Ο δὲ εἶπε· ‘Πόλιν τε τὴν σὴν διαρπάζει καὶ χρήματα τὰ σὰ διαφορέει’; Arist., HA 604b.28: ‘Υπὸ φαρμάκου δὲ διαφορεῖται καὶ ἵππος καὶ πᾶν ὑποζύγιον σανδαράκης· δίδοται δ’ ἐν ὕδατι καὶ διηθεῖται. The counterpart for aor. ζαφορῆσαι, an aorist inf. διαφορῆσαι, is also attested in prosaic works (mostly of scientific, medical sort), cf. e.g. D., Contra Eub. 65.6: ὥσπερ φυγάδος ἥδη μου ὅντος καὶ ἀπολωλότος, τούτων τινὲς ἐπὶ τὸ οἰκίδιον ἐλθόντες <τὸ> ἐν ἀγρῷ νύκτωρ

λευγαλέον δ’ ἐπὶ οἴ πριν χόλον, ἐκ δ’ ἀίδηλα
δείκηλα προίαλλεν, ἐπιζάφελον κοτέουσα.

ἐπεχείρησαν διαφορῆσαι τὰ ἔνδοθεν· The small change of a meaning ‘to carry away’ and then ‘to load’ may be assumed.

ζαφόρος

Hsch. Z 78 ζαφόρος· πολυφόρος adj. nom. sg. ‘bringing much, fertile’; the form is Hesychean hapax legomenon without an indication of dialectal origin. From the formal point of view the form is an adjective, which contains the «Lesbian» intensive ζα- in the first and verbal noun φορός in the second element. ζα- seems to be in this case a synonym of πολύ-, cf. πολυφόρος ‘prolific, fertile’ (attested rarely since Pl., Leg. 705b.1: τραχεῖα δὲ οὖσα δῆλον ώς οὐκ ἀν πολύφορός τε εἴη καὶ πάμφορος ἄμα· τοῦτο γάρ ἔχουσα, πολλὴν ἔξαγωγὴν ἔν). The counterpart forms with δια- are attested in the inscriptions in substantized form διαφορον, cf. MYT 04.17 ως κε μηδ[εν] διαφορον ειη and line 24 [ουτοι δε πρωτον μεν φυλασσ]οντον και επιμελεσθον ως μηδεν εσ[σεται διαφορον, which obviously means ‘disagreement’ (cf. διαφέρω ‘dis-tract, to be different’)<sup>43</sup>, adj. διάφορος occurs everywhere in Greek Prose, cf. e.g. Hdt. V 75.6: Σπαρτιητέων, και συνεξαγαγών τε τὴν στρατιὴν ἐκ Λακεδαίμονος και οὐκ ἐών διάφορος ἐν τῷ πρόσθε χρόνῳ Κλεομένει. In later inscriptions and papyri the form occurs also in context of money: e.g. in meaning ‘cash, expenses, sum of money, price’<sup>44</sup>. The form should be considered a poetic one, the evidence is too scanty to precisely state whether it is a real Epic element or an analogic formation.

ζαχραεῖς

Hsch. Z 80 ζαχραεῖς· ἐξαπιναίους adj. acc. pl. ‘sudden’, without an indication of dialectal origin. The form does not occur in Lesbian inscriptions, it is not attested in the literary dialect. It corresponds to the Hom. adj. ζαχροής, ές used in poems only in pl., in the context of warriors and winds, with the meaning ‘attacking violently, furious, raging’ (LSJ), e.g. M 347 (= 360) ζαχρηεῖς τελέθουσι κατὰ κρατερὰς ύσμίνας; N 684: ζαχρηεῖς γίγνοντο μάχη αὐτοί τε καὶ ἵπποι. The Hom. form was also used in the late Epic, e.g. A.R. IV 835: Εἰ μὲν δὴ μαλεροῖ πυρὸς μένος ἡδὲ θύελλαι || ζαχρηεῖς λήξουσιν ἐτήτυμον, ἢ τ' ἀν ἔγωγε; or Nic., Th. 290: ζαχρεὶς θλιφθεῖσα κατομφάλιος τετάνυσται. The form consists of both phonetically and functionally «Lesbian» ζά (= διά) + aor. stem ἔχρα(Φ)ον ‘s’attaquer á’ (DELG II, 397)<sup>45</sup> from **χρῆσ (/*χρᾶ(Φ)ος), which continues the root *g<sup>h</sup>reh<sub>1</sub>u- or better *g<sup>h</sup>reh<sub>2</sub>u-, ‘stürzen, losstürzen’ in aor. ἔχραον ‘fiel an, überfiel’, cf. Lat. in-gruī (LIV<sup>2</sup>, 202). The gloss should be interpreted as containing /a:/ instead of Hom.-Ion. /e:/; it can therefore hardly come from the Homeric texts. Some traces of the existence of the postulated /a:/ variant of ζαχρηίς may be found in the Scholia in Nic. Th. 290c (scholia vetera), where we read in one cod. *ζαχραὲς θλιβεῖσα ~ ζαχρηὲς θλιφθεῖσα Par., ζαχραής (DELG II, 397: Epic. in Arch. Pap. 7.6; also LSJ). In fact such kind of post-Homeric poetic tradition can be the source of the gloss.

As stated above all the glosses containing ζά element have been qualified as Lesbian in collection of Hoffmann 1893, pp. 228-248, after the entry in Comp. III of Philoponus. It seems, however, more probable that they all (except for special cases as ζάγρη and ζάπεδον) belong to the poetical diction (even if the possibility of existing in the vernacular use in some cases cannot be excluded), where since early Epic the metrically caused variants ζα- and δια- existed hand in hand (cf. Hawkins 2004, pp. 46-71). The occurring interchange ζά for διά for the metrical reason in Sappho and Alcaeus should then be considered another element of Epic/Homeric influence upon an independent Aeolic poetical tradition.
